

RULE OF LAW

- The rule of law is considered to be a fundamental cornerstone of the UK constitution. While the powers of the government are not as clearly limited as in countries that have a codified constitution, they are bound by a commitment to the rule of law.
- However, a government with a parliamentary majority is always able to change UK law, because of the principle of parliamentary sovereignty.
- The rule of law is also a fundamental concept in the ideology of conservatism. This shared commitment is one of the ways in which society is organised to prevent chaos and to ensure a harmonious, organic society.